ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

India, the world's largest democracy, is almost perpetually in election mode. With 28 states, eight union territories, and nearly a billion eligible voters, polls have become a constant feature of the nation's political landscape often celebrated as a festival of democracy.

The idea of "One Nation, One Election" has once again taken center stage in India's democratic and policy discourse. The Constitution (One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Amendment) Bill, 2024 proposes synchronising elections to the House of the People (Lok Sabha) and all State Legislative Assemblies, with the stated objectives of enhancing governance efficiency, reducing electoral expenditure, and minimising the administrative and developmental disruptions caused by frequent elections.

Simultaneous elections were the norm in the early decades following independence. However, this alignment was disrupted in the late 1960s due to premature dissolutions of certain State Assemblies and the Lok Sabha, resulting in staggered electoral cycles. Over the years, expert bodies including the 170th Report of the Law Commission of India and the 79th Report of the Parliamentary Standing Committee have recommended a return to synchronised elections.

Most recently, the High-Level Committee chaired by Shri Ram Nath Kovind, former President of India, has recommended a phased implementation of simultaneous elections. To enable this, the 2024 Bill proposes significant constitutional amendments, including the insertion of a new Article 82-A and modifications to Articles 83, 172, and 327 of the Constitution.

While the proposal offers compelling administrative and economic benefits, it also raises nuanced concerns about constitutional propriety, the preservation of India's federal structure, the vibrancy of voter engagement, and the functioning of a multi-tiered parliamentary democracy.

In this context, the proposed National Conference will provide a platform for academicians, legal scholars, policymakers, political leaders, students, and researchers to engage in a multi-dimensional dialogue on the subject. The discussions will aim to dissect the constitutional, legal, political, administrative, and socio-economic ramifications of this proposed reform.

OBJECTIVES OF THE CONFERENCE

- To critically examine the constitutional validity of the proposed amendments for implementing 'One Nation, One Election'.
- To assess the impact on India's federal structure
